A new holiday park by Hjelm Bay on Møn is envisaged to go by the name Møns Klint Holiday Park. In its final form, the holiday park will consist of 497 holiday homes spread over 69 small housing clusters. Each cluster is envisaged to become a little community of its own in which the holidaymakers can come together for activities around a central area.

The ambition is for the holiday park to be constructed from sustainable wood that meets the DGNB Gold standard. According to the project backers, that would make it the first holiday resort in Denmark to meet those criteria. In the same vein, the project backers also aim to meet the UN Sustainable Development Goal for sustainability, which is also in line with Vordingborg Municipality sustainable tourism strategy.

The concept development group Cliffs of Denmark is behind the holiday park plans. Cliffs of Denmark is affiliated with the investment firm Great Global Holdings, headed by its founder and CEO John Bengt Møller.
